

VERTEBRATES	INVERTEBRATES
They have a backbone. There are different types of vertebrates: mammals, reptiles, amphibians, birds and fish.	They don't have a backbone. There are different types of invertebrates: arthropods and molluscs.

FILL IN THE GAPS WITH ONE WORD; YOU CAN ONLY USE EACH WORD ONCE

GILLS, MILK, WATER, SCALES, SKIN, FEATHERS, FINS, HAIR, EGGS, FLY

MAMMALS:

Mammals usually have fur or _____. They are viviparous so they have live babies that drink _____. They can do lots of things like run, walk, swim, jump or fly. They breathe with their lungs.

REPTILES:

Reptiles usually have skin or _____. They are oviparous so they lay _____ on land. They can live in water or on land.

AMPHIBIANS:

Amphibians usually breathe with lungs or _____. They are oviparous so they lay eggs. They can live in water or on land and they have soft moist _____.

BIRDS:

Birds usually have wings, legs, _____ and a beak. They are oviparous so they lay eggs. Most of them can _____ and they live in different habitats.

FISH:

Fish live in _____ and they breathe with gills. They are oviparous so they lay eggs. They have scales and _____. They can swim and they eat things like plankton, insects, water plants and other fish.

Answers:

MAMMALS:

Mammals usually have fur or hair. They are viviparous so they have live babies that drink milk. They can do lots of things like run, walk, swim, jump or fly. They breathe with their lungs.

REPTILES:

Reptiles usually have skin or scales. They are oviparous so they lay eggs on land. They can live in water or on land.

AMPHIBIANS:

Amphibians usually breathe with lungs or gills. They are oviparous so they lay eggs. They can live in water or on land and they have soft moist skin.

BIRDS:

Birds usually have wings, legs, feathers and a beak. They are oviparous so they lay eggs. Most of them can fly and live in different habitats.

FISH:

Fish live in water and they breathe with gills. They are oviparous so they lay eggs. They have scales and fins. They can swim and they eat things like plankton, insects, water plants and other fish.